Heosan Baekryun Ji is a 100,000 pyeong sized reservoir built during the dark times of Japanese colonization and it served to provide irrigation to adjacent agricultural time. After a villager living nearby first planted 12 white lotus flowers, he dreamed a dream where twelve white cranes sat along the reservoir. So, he took great care and the reservoir became a huge wild habitat for splendid white lotus flowers.

Most of the lotuses found in Korea are Red Lotus. The Lotuses are quite rare. This makes the Baekryun Ji the largest habitat for The Lotus in East Asia. It is also known to professional botanists as one of the few remaining group habitats for thorn lotuses. There are more than 30 varieties of lotuses and more than 50 species of other plants in the habitat and facilities that help visitors learn about the aquatic ecosystem of the habitat. The White Lotus Festival is held around July and August every year.

White Lotus, the gentleman of all the flowers.

Since the lotus blooms with clear, bright flowers among the muddy waters, it has long since been a traditional symbol of Buddhism representing enlightenment, nirvana, and the concept of Buddhist eternal life. The Lotus is called "the gentleman of all the flowers". Also, it represents richness and fecundity as it has numerous seed bags. That is why the white lotus is drawn or embroidered on clothes very often.

The Lotus, originating from India and Egypt, blooms with white flowers between June and October, and do not bloom at once, but rather bloom and fall continuously in a three month cycle.

Swimming Pool

There is a swimming pool near the habitat where family can have fun, appreciating the beauty of The Lotus
